Essentials of Management for New Managers

A foundation course that helps newly appointed managers move confidently from individual work to leading a team, and understand what the role demands from day one.

Code	HT-MGT-102
Category	Management & Leadership
Duration	1 week
Level	Beginner
City	Online

Introduction

The first months in a management role are decisive: a strong individual contributor is suddenly accountable for other people's results, usually with little preparation for such a different kind of work.

Objectives

- Understand the shift from individual contributor to manager accountable for team results
- Plan team work, assign tasks and track progress with simple tools
- Agree clear performance expectations with each team member
- Give constructive feedback and handle first difficult conversations
- Build effective working relationships with the line manager, peers and team

Who should attend

- Employees recently promoted to supervisory or management roles
- Supervisors and team leaders in their first year
- High-potential staff preparing for a management role
- Heads of small units in public and private organizations

Skills you will develop

- Work planning and follow-up
- Setting expectations
- Constructive feedback
- Running one-to-one meetings

Learning Outcomes

- Prepare a personal plan for the first 90 days in the role
- Draft a written expectations agreement with a team member
- Run a structured one-to-one meeting with a clear agenda
- Deliver performance feedback using the SBI (Situation-Behavior-Impact) model
